Creates Alliance with Sawyer & Company

MILWAUKEE – March 25, 2010 – Jefferson Wells, a global provider of risk advisory, tax, and finance and accounting-related services, today announced it has established an alliance with Sawyer & Company, a specialist forensic and investigative accounting firm. The alliance agreement was completed on March 1, 2010.

“Our clients are deeply concerned about risk and fraud issues and the impact they can have on their bottom line. Our value to our clients is our proven ability to provide targeted expertise matched to their needs,” said Michael Touhey, president and chief operating officer of Jefferson Wells. “This partnership enhances our existing forensic accounting delivery capabilities to our clients by enabling us to leverage and integrate our solutions with Sawyer’s extensive niche expertise in specialized technical areas including intricate forensic accounting investigations and litigation support.”

The highly complex world of forensic and investigative accounting requires deep technical expertise and knowledge. With fraud incidents on the rise, the demand for specialized expertise in areas such as forensic accounting investigations, computer forensics and litigation support has markedly increased, particularly in industries such as financial services, healthcare, construction and communications.

“Through this alliance we gain a highly respected partner in Jefferson Wells, one that has an outstanding risk management and advisory infrastructure,” said David Sawyer, president of Sawyer & Company. “By collaborating with Jefferson Wells’ unmatched global talent and expertise, we can now deliver our focused forensic and investigative accounting services to a broader portfolio of clients.”
